It's tough to get the right loan.

"You can tell they really

I'm getting the best loan for me."

IPI introduces our One Step construction loan. Great rates. Zero points. Single closing.

At IPI, we understand just how difficult it can be to buy land and to build your dream house. Typically, you'd start with a short-term land loan, then go to a construction loan and finally an "end loan" or conventional mortgage. And typically, you'd pay points or fees every step of the way. Not to mention the aggravation of separate closings.

Not anymore. IPI is proud to announce our One Step construction loan. It's the only zero-point, single-closing land/construction/end loan available that is underwritten entirely on site in our Main Street, Bridgehampton office. This comprehensive program offers you a single interest rate for all three phases of your project, from beginning to end. And most important, IPI locks in your interest rate—in advance, at no additional cost—for 12 months, not for 60 days like other brokers or banks.

We can offer innovative programs like our One Step construction loan because we've consolidated our loan officers, processors, underwriters and closers under one roof. Our experienced mortgage professionals represent more than 100 preferred lenders, so we can find the best possible program at the best possible price for you. And because IPI is the largest mortgage broker in the Northeast, you get the best of two worlds: New York big and Hamptons local.

Featherbed Blowout

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Protests At Southampton Town Hall, Montauk Lighthouse And The Indian Reservation

By Dan Rattiner

During the last month there have been many protests here on the East End. They have involved such diverse issues as Indian lands, building moratoriums, a fishermen's memorial, even the hiring of town attorneys in Southampton.

Meanwhile, last Tuesday, the economy achieved another milestone, officially becoming the longest continuous period of prosperity in the country's history, surpassing an eight year expansion that ended in 1967. It may be a coincidence, but it was toward the end of that last expansion that Americans began to become very politically active, demonstrating in the streets against everything from the A-bomb to hunting whales to the treatment of coal miners in Kentucky to the Vietnam War.

People who have been around awhile and remember the demonstrations of the late '60s and early '70s, say the things they felt back then seem to have returned last summer when for the first time there were placard-carrying, slogan chanting demonstrators on the sidewalk in front of the windmill in East Hampton. The occasion was the arrival for a campaign swing by Vice President Al Gore. The protesters were demonstrating against the reopening of a nuclear power plant in Connecticut.

"We wanted to make sure the Vice President got to see us," a protestor said. It was the first time in maybe twenty years that a demonstration was taking place on the highway.

One month ago, demonstrators appeared at the waders hauling in a net, is a spectacular sight on this piece of land. Views are of the water in almost every direction. It's a place where people might bring flowers or come to pray. It's just that everyone seemed to have forgotten that visiting the site would require the payment of the lighthouse fee.

Personally, I think this renewed interest in chanting and having signs is a positive thing.

chain link fence by the toll booth at the entrance to the Montauk Lighthouse. Visitors were being charged $5 for an adult, $4 for a child, and the problem was that after two years of planning, a memorial to the more than three hundred boatmen and fishermen who have lost their lives while trying to earn a living off eastern Long Island has been put on a piece of land by the Lighthouse and to get there, you have to pay a fee.

It had not been intended that way. The memorial, an eight foot bronze sculpture of a fisherman in

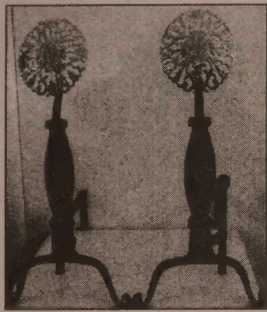

The Montauk Boatman's Association officially denounced these demonstrators, but at the same time said they could understand the frustration of the demonstrators. A majority of the boatmen felt that the few dollars to pay was a very acceptable tradeoff to get this magnificent site. And there were fee exemptions for fishermen and boating families.

Still, the demonstrators left a wide variety of buoys and lobster pots and seaweed and tangled fishing line at the toll booth, a reminder of their unhappiness.

Since this one at the lighthouse, there have been three other demonstrations. One of them, in front of Southampton Town Hall, involved a variety of contractors, builders and developers loudly protesting a plan by the town to have a six month building moratorium. There was no reason for this,

The New York Observer has found a way to bring Hamptonites into Manhattan while leaving them in the Hamptons. In joining in the celebration of the New York Post's Fashion Week party at the Guastavino's on 59th Street, they assigned Frank DiGiacomo to gather together all of the reporters who at one time or another worked for the New York Post's Page Six. Di Giacomo would take a picture of them. Twenty-two people showed up, some from as far away as England, but they left a blank space in the photograph for Neal Travis who founded Page Six in 1977 and James Brady, the editor who succeeded him, both of whom were in the Hamptons and would later have their photos stripped in.

Neil Hirsch, the polo playing electronics millionaire who brought polo back to Bridgehampton, has opened a nightclub in Palm Beach. The name? Neil's, of course. Recently, he threw a surprise party for model Nick Manifold and insurance millionaire David Rubin and attending were many Hamptonites including Kelly Klein, Stephanie Seymour and her husband Peter Brant, a polo pal of Neil's. Also, Internet mogul, Michael Donahue and former Senator Alfons D'Amato, who is from that town that balances the Hamptons on the other side of the island, Island Park.

Steven Spielberg of East Hampton underwent surgery last week to have a kidney removed. He's recovering nicely and all best wishes go out to him.

Speaking of Hamptonites who can be in New York and out in the Hamptons at the same time, consider Lauren Bacall. On Sunday evening, February 20, she might be in East Hampton but then again you could see her on stage in the play Bacall By Herself as interpreted by female impersonator James Beaman. Beaman has been acclaimed for his extraordinary impersonations of Marlene Deitrich in Black Marlene and Queen of the World. Now he's doing Bacall. "Tart, Tasteless and Terrific," says The Boston Herald. "Superbly drawn," says Backstage. Performances are on February 20, March 5, 12 and 19, at Don't Tell Mama on West 46th Street. Kind of makes your hair stand on end, doesn't it?

Under the steady leadership of W. Peter Daniels, Southampton Hospital has been brought back to financial health. Mr. Daniels, President and CEO, announced last week that the hospital will have a break-even budget for the year 2000. This is an incredible bounce back from combined losses of $47 million in '96 and '97 and $10 in '98. Daniel's said it was made possible by a bond sale that reduced debt payments and by a belt tightening on expenses.

East Hampton's Ted Kheel, who is President of the Earth Pledge Foundation, is co-hosting a the demonstrators said, and putting it into effect would jeopardize the ability of everyone in the building business to earn a living.

A second demonstration took place on Route 27A, just west of the Shinnecock Reservation. The company, Parrish Pond Associates, had a crew of workers on a sixty-three acre site, clearing the land in anticipation of a thirty-eight lot subdivision for which he had gotten approval. But the land clearing had only begun when a group of Indian residents emerged from the adjacent reservation to say that documents revealing the land had been unfairly given to the white men in the 19th century, presented to a judge, and so the ownership of the land was in dispute. Also there were sacred relics buried in the ground. Faced with this group of Indians, both male and female, who stood in the way of his land clearing equipment, xxxxxxxx called off his men and said he would not proceed until the dispute was settled.

The third and last demonstration was also in Southampton, in front of Town Hall. After the elections were over last November, it was the supervisor's job, starting a new regime, to appoint five new town attorneys. The appointments were announced and it was seen that not one of the five came from a minority group of any kind.

Southampton Supervisor Vince Cannuscio, who oversaw the selection but had not personally been involved in making it, said it was obvious to him a mistake had been made, and that one, possibly even two of the attorneys should be let go so that minority attorneys – and several highly qualified candidates had been mentioned by this time – should take their place.

This however, would have made the matter worse, because several of the five had left jobs in order to take on the town assignment. So it became, for Southampton officials, damned if they did and damned if they didn't and no way out of this mess, an unsolvable problem. At least at first.

Soon, however, the protesters were out and if the Town officials thought they were in trouble BEFORE they finally announced a solution to this insoluble problem, they were in even deeper trouble when they finally did.

They would resolve it at taxpayers' expense, expanding the number of town attorneys hired from five to seven and giving the two new jobs to minorities. That it had already been determined there was only enough work for five jobs was now the new subject of the demonstration, marchers walking back and forth in front of town hall, chanting and waving signs.

Personally I think that this renewed interest in chanting and waving signs is a positive thing. It gets the blood flowing, is good exercise and sharpens the mind. There is nothing like a demonstration to get people to think about politics and ethics, and how, without the economy to worry about, well, they can get upset and do something about it.

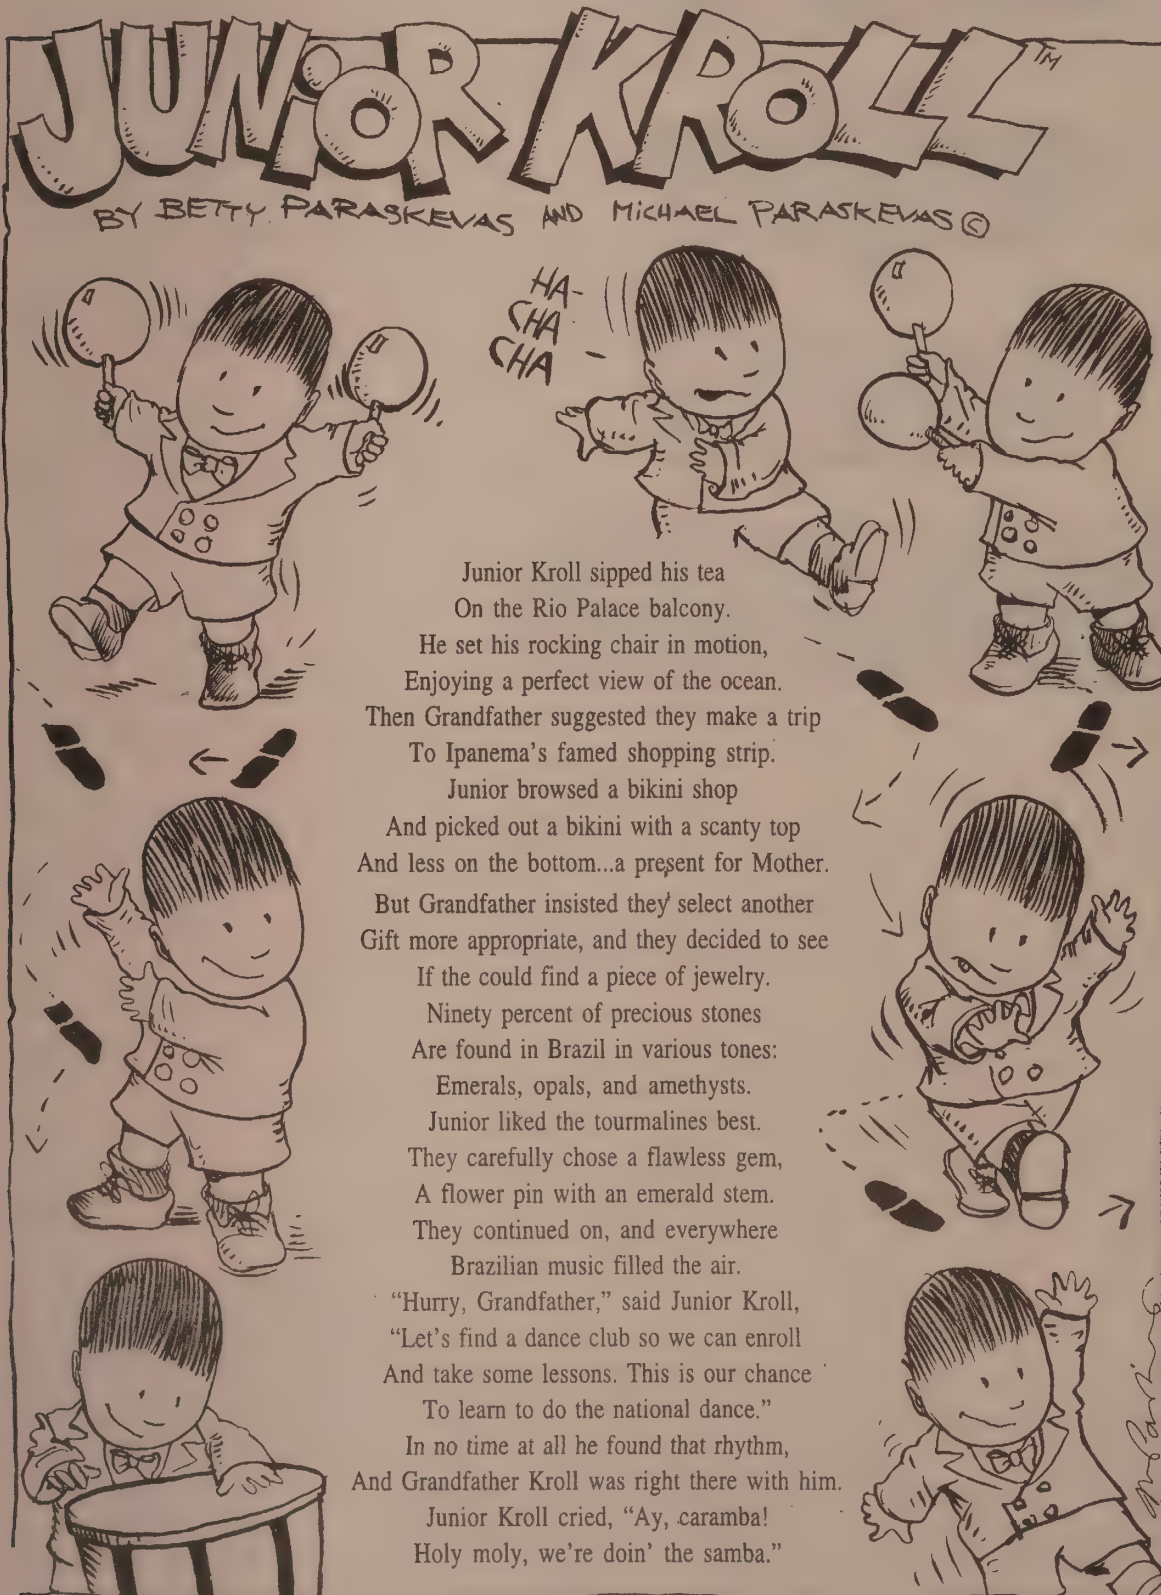

We seem to be entering interesting times. •

The Poor, The Middle Class, The Well To Do, The Rich, The Rich Beyond Dreams

By Dan Rattiner

The former chairman of Netscape, an Internet-based software company, has donated $100 million to the University of Mississippi to be used to improve literacy. Mississippi has the lowest literacy rate in the country, and James L. Barksdale and his wife Sally, are Mississippians. They also announced they are going to build a home in Jackson, Mississippi and are moving there from Seattle. Furthermore, this is only the first of bequests that James and Sally Barksdale are going to make.

"It's my intention to give everything I've made away," Barksdale said. "If there's a dollar left, the only reason will be that the accountants made a mistake."

Considering that Mr. Barksdale walked away with almost two hundred million dollars when Netscape was purchased by America Online, this is quite a statement. Furthermore, considering that we live in an area where a great many wealthy people have chosen to build their homes, it has made me wonder about the meaning of money and the differences between being poor, middle class, well-to-do, very wealthy, and wealthy beyond one's wildest dreams. Clearly, Mr. Barksdale has become wealthy beyond his wildest dreams. He's only fifty-one years old; look what he's decided to do with this money.

But, let me start from the top, or rather the bottom, and work my way up. There's poor for Besides which — when I once lived for six months in a dirt poor commune that raised turnips and squash, that's all we ate for one of those months. The food is lousy when you're poor.

Next comes the middle class, and there is the lower middle class and the upper middle class and the difference between them is that with the upper middle class, the toys are more numerous, better built, niftier and larger. The middle class, both lower and upper, has to carefully watch its money, day by day and week by week, but it gets by with an occasional perk here and there. It's not bad being in the middle-class at all, at least in America. You work. You get your rewards.

The well-to-do still have to watch their money, but only with an occasional look from time to time. The toys could be phenomenal, Porsches, private schools for the kids, swimming pools, tennis and golf. The well-to-do get along fine on a day to day basis and considering that they can only eat three meals a day and sleep in only one room at night, can enjoy just about the best of everything within reason.

Well-to-do people say, "It's better to be rich than be poor," and they are right

It's interesting to note at this point, I've reached instance, and some of us are there and others of us have at one time been there, and the definition of it in America is, you can't put enough food on the table without getting some kind of help.

Poor is not good. In a society where money is the measure of goods and services, there is a lot of pain associated with being poor. Others have to give to help out. There is shame, guilt, bitterness, even anger associated with poverty.

about the top limit of what a person can earn, by working at a job. The lower middle class people will probably be out there assembling things at a typical business. The upper middle class people will be the managers and the vice-presidents and the well to do will be the presidents of the many small and mid-size companies that abound in America. They also might be highly paid professionals such as lawyers or surgeons and so forth. Well-to-do people can not only own their own home, but even a second home, somewhere, but just one second home, otherwise they're looking for trouble.

The leap from well-to-do to very wealthy, generally occurs only when a man or a woman is paid for more than they can do in an eight hour day at some regular rate of pay.

I am reminded of a decision made by the late Bernard Lewis, a black man who went to Harvard Law School and brokered some of the great take-over deals in the 1980s. He'd come home brooding; one day his wife asked him about it.

"We're all sitting at this table," he said, "and some of these people are making fifty and a hundred million dollars on the deal, and I'm charging by the hour. I get a lot by the hour, hundreds of dollars an hour. But in comparison, it's nothing. I'm missing out."

From this revelation, Lewis, who owned the Bell Estate for a while in Amagansett, took some risks and became a wheeler dealer himself. Before his untimely death at the age of forty-eight, he had assembled a giant conglomerate called Beatrice TLC and was worth well over a hundred million dollars. He was the richest black man in the country and used much of his money to build a medical research institute at Harvard. He also wrote a book, entitled, Why Should White Men Have All the Fun?

Personally, from my experience here in the very wealthy Hamptons, I would categorize the net worth of someone in this category to be between ten and fifty million dollars. These are people who could afford three second homes, or ten second homes. They can have a garage with a fleet of ten antique cars in it. If they could and wanted to, they could eat non-stop, twenty-four hours a day with the finest food from anywhere in the world brought to them. They can in fact get not only what they want they can get everything they want, and they can get it ten times over, which makes no sense.

And so, they are faced with a problem, if you can call it a problem, of what to do with this excess money. They are the lowest people on the totem pole who have to face this problem, but there it is.

Here is how they solve this problem. They can trickle the money out to a variety of charities. They can re-invest the money to make more money, although they'll put themselves at risk of losing the money. They can leave the money to their next of kin to let them worry about it. They can even cook up some kind of bizarre way of helping with their money. There's a man I know who once a year gives away a million dollars at random.

"How about me?" somebody will ask.

"It's random," he would reply. "I'm keeping the world off balance." People can do strange things when they're very rich.

The real interesting part occurs when someone is propelled from very rich to rich beyond ones wildest dreams, which James Barksdale has, and then decides to give it all away. Not many people do that.

In the past month, two people that I know who have houses in the Hamptons were propelled from point A to point B. One of them was Jerry Levin, the CEO of Time Warner. He had entered the world of the very rich by heading up that large company and by obtaining some stocks and some options. But he was hurled into the stratosphere of rich beyond his wildest dreams when he engineered the sale of Time Warner to America Online.

Another man I know who's gone from being very rich to rich beyond his wildest dreams in the past couple of months is Bob Pittman. I've known Pitman since he was the vice president at Time Warner when Time Warner was under the leadership of Steve Ross. Pittman became head of Century 21 for awhile and then a vice president of America Online. When Steve Case, of AOL, took over Time Warner, Pitman who is a brilliant marketer and was second in command, was propelled into the stratosphere of rich beyond one's wildest dreams.

I should note that I haven't spoken to either of these men since all this happened. Indeed, I would say that I only know them casually, but the world of rich beyond your wildest dreams has got to be an intimidating one. Certainly, I'm no

Sound Stage

Huge TV And Film Studio Rises In The Woods Next To East Hampton Airport

By Dan Rattiner

Up until about 1980, if you wanted to make a movie requiring a giant set, you had to pack everybody up and go to the Pinewood Studio in England, which was the biggest facility in the world at that time. Since then, giant sound stages have been built on the West Coast and in the South but until this month there never has been one of that scale in the New York Metropolitan area. Sometime in the next few weeks, the completion of the LTV Sound Stage out by the East Hampton Airport in Wainscott will take place. It will have a clear interior space larger than half a football field, measuring 110 feet on one side and 196 feet on the other side. The ceiling height is an unprecedented forty five feet above the floor.

"I know of no such sound stage with these dimensions in the northeast," Frazer Dougherty, President of the facility said.

We were sitting in the producer's lounge of the LTV Television Studio building, a facility almost ten years old, that houses a public access TV studio, a commercial television station, a tape library and Studio Three where films and television programs are created. This entire building, one of the largest structures in the Hamptons when it was built, will well known Broadway and film set designer and crews of workmen from Advanced Building Systems in Port Jefferson are busy getting it done. We toured dressing rooms and a film crew cafeteria.

In many ways the building of this sound stage and production studio seems inevitable in the Hamptons. Alec Baldwin lives in Amagansett...

easily fit inside the new sound stage building with room to spare. The older building and the much larger newer one sit side by side, with only a hundred feet or so separating them. Along with a scenery shop and several other buildings, they comprise the LTV Media Center, one of the most remarkable facilities here on the East End.

Dougherty took me on a tour of the big new building, which he said should top out at a cost of about a million and half-dollars.

The structure was designed by Peter Larkin, the

"We have to feed film making crews every six hours, it's a union law," Dougherty said.

Something called the Long Room, which is a space twenty five feet wide and a hundred and twenty feet long, can be used as offices or studios, or as a film room where a truck loaded with movie making equipment and films could be driven in, offloaded and the film rolls changed. Then of course there is the giant sound stage.

"It's fully insulated and climate controlled," Dougherty said. "And with its great height, sets could be built multi level. It could accommodate anything in a filmmaker's imagination."

One director/filmmaker who has already announced that he intends to use the facility is John Corso, who was the cinematographer on Fatal Attraction, First Wives Club and several other

Nah

Why This Writer Can't Vote For Someone Who Dithers And Dithers For Six Months

By Dan Rattiner

Hillary Clinton has finally and officially announced that she's running for the Senate. She made the announcement last week with the outgoing Senator Moynihan on one side of her and President Clinton, her husband on the other side of her and other than the fact that she's going to be running against Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, I have a hard time seeing any reason why I should vote for her.

Consider everything that she's been known for, for the last eight years.

She did, seven years ago, make an absolutely catastrophic proposal for national health care. She studied the matter for almost ten months, and what she came up with was a nine thousand page document that was so complicated, so bureaucratic, and so expensive that even though National Health Care is probably a very good thing, there was no way that anybody in the Senate could vote for it. It was killed in committee and National Health Care hasn't been heard from since.

Hillary was next in the news fending off accusations of something called Whitewater. This was a proposed real estate development, where Bill and Hillary and their partners put up a bunch of money, bought some raw land and proposed to sell off lots in it and make a bundle. The accusations were that the Clintons received special treatment because Bill Clinton was Governor of the State at the time. There's no question but that Hillary, is a lawyer, billed for hours that she was hard pressed to explain. But in the end, it was found that there was no corruption, it was merely that the Clintons were incompetent. Whatever money they had put in, they had lost. No development took place.

Hillary's next flurry into the public limelight came when she attended the opening of the Gaza Airport in Palestine. She sat politely, her hands crossed in her lap, while Suha Tawil Arafat, the wife of Yasir Arafat, accused the Jews of gassing Palestinians. It's true, she didn't applaud when the speech ended, but she did embrace the woman who made these charges.

Most recently, just a week and a half ago, Hillary Clinton made the amazing discovery that there are huge real estate taxes to be paid to the State of New York every year. She's fifty-two years old, and hundreds of thousands of people have no doubt written letters to her husband to do something about the high real estate taxes around the nation. Now, she and Bill are homeowners in Chappaqua, New York, and she just couldn't believe there were these high real estate taxes they would have to pay.

"We need to do something about that." She told her cheering supporters.

Finally, you come to Hillary's decision-making abilities. Eight months ago, Senator Moynihan announced that he would retire, paving the way for anyone interested to follow in his footsteps. Hillary boldly stepped in and announced that she would form an exploratory committee. Two months later the exploration was over and she announced that she would be going around the state listening to people. After three months of listening, when asked if she had made up her mind, she said she was still thinking about it. Two months after that, she went before a crowd and said she was leaning toward making the run for the seat. Then a month later she announced that she was an unofficial candidate. A month ago she held a huge party in Manhattan at which time she said that this would be the last gathering at which she would not be a candidate. Three weeks ago she gathered with the media and said that she would give them an advance notice on her announcement of her candidacy, but that this wasn't it. And then finally, last week, she made the decision. She'd be a candidate to make a run for the Senate.

Never did I see a politician do so much dithering and dilly dallying in all my life. American history is filled with men and woman who boldly decided of the graduating class of June 1950, P.S. 119 (The Amersfort) of Brooklyn, NY will be held in May of 2000. All alumni of the class are invited to contact Alan L. Berger or Paula Held Sharf, the Reunion Committee, so that they may be included in the invitation list. Mr. Berger and Ms. Sharf would also appreciate being informed as to the locations of any fellow graduates of 1950 whose current whereabouts may be known to you.

The exact date and location of the reunion will be determined when the committee knows the number of people expected to attend. However, it is known that the gathering will be in the New York Metropolitan Area on a Sunday afternoon. There will be time for renewing acquaintances, catching up on family news, and having a generally grand time.

If you are a 1950 graduate of P.S. 119 of the Flatbush section of Brooklyn, or know of such graduates, please contact either Alan L. Berger at 631-261-2600 or e-mail him at AlanBergES@aol.com; or Paula Held Sharf at 718-423-6200, or e-mail her at phsharf@webtv.net as soon as possible. They look forward to greeting you in May of 2000 at this gala event.

movies and who now has several movie projects in the works including a World War II epic and a romantic murder mystery called Dead Men Don't Dance. Dougherty said he's also had an indirect call from the people who are doing a couple of Alec Baldwin movies.

In many ways the building of this sound stage and production studio seems inevitable in the Hamptons. Alec Baldwin lives in Amagansett, Steven Spielberg lives in East Hampton and Alan Alda lives in Mecox. There are literally thousands of people connected with the movie and television business living in the Hamptons. And the LTV Media Center is not even the first such facility in the woods of the East Hampton Industrial Park out by the airport. Fifteen years ago, Brian Ferren, a local boy who graduated East Hampton High School with a particular knack for making explosions, opened a special effects studio here. His monsters have been seen in Star Trek movies and the movie Little Shop of Horrors starring Rick Moranis and several Broadway shows including Frankenstein. The facility is now owned by Walt Disney Studios, though it is still run by Brian Ferren.

Back at the office of Dan's Papers on the Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton, a facility which is not suitable for making anything but maybe a five minute short, I got on the phone with Director/Producer John Corso in Manhattan.

"A lot of people have talked about building such a facility," Corso said. "But, Frazer has actually gone ahead and done it. Until now, the closest production studio facility to Manhattan was in Wilmington, North Carolina I don't even think there are direct flights from New York to Wilmington. The LTV space should do very well."

there, and at this juncture it seems highly unlikely that I ever will be, but it does make me wonder if I'd even want to aspire to such a thing. Such people are sometimes called the Masters of the Universe or more specifically, Master of the Universe, as if there is only one universe and they are masters of it, but since there are other people who have achieved this title, then there must be a parallel universe. Two of these people in the same room therefore, are ships passing in the night.

What do you do with this kind of money? Money that you know that you could never possibly spend? Indeed, the things that this money can buy are sometimes of such great worth that to own them must feel like them owning you for a while. You buy a Cezanne or a Picasso and it's worth millions, it's not something you consume or use up, and then throw the remains into the dump or have it buried with you when you die. A Picasso or a Cezanne is just letting you borrow it for a while. Eventually it moves on to a new owner. You may have made a profit on it, but it's really not yours.

Is it worth it? I don't know.

Nobody knows. Bill Gates is worth a hundred billion dollars and he has established a charitable foundation, which I'm told he's funded with about ten billion. Hey Bill, what about the other ninety billion, or maybe eighty-nine billion? A billion dollars is a lot of money. How many of them do you need?

The story of James and Sally Barksdale is an extraordinary one, that's for sure. But, I think if I were a member of his immediate family, I might think it a bit extreme. I think it must be good to give a lot of this stuff away, doing it while you're alive and well enough to enjoy having done it. It is true that this is a strange little essay, but I've been running this newspaper for a long time now, and have seen the kind of money that I'm talking about move in where it hadn't been here before.

I think, though, that because it is better to be rich than poor, the Hamptons are the better for it. The place could only do so much in the way of preservation when it was struggling. Now, we're the trophy to the American dream. As a byproduct we have enough money to save the place.

book review: shared dreams

Shared Dreams by Rabbi Marc Schneier of the Hampton Synagogue, tells the story of Dr. Martin Luther King's struggle for civil rights in America and the great men who stood by his side and participated in his non-violent battle against racism. Schneier quotes Abraham Joshua Heschel, a Hasidic scholar who became a close friend of Martin Luther King, Jr., and an active member in the civil rights struggle:

"A Moral Person is a partisan who loves the love of good. It is not true that love and obedience cannot live together, that the good never springs from the heart. To be free of selfish interests does not mean to be neutral, indifferent, or devoid of interests, but on the contrary, to be a partisan of the self-surpassing. God does not dwell beyond the sky. He dwells, we believe, in every heart that is willing to let him in."

He goes on to say, "Racism is worse than idolatry. Racism is satanism. Few of us seem to realize how insidious, how radical, how universal and evil, racism is. Few of us realize that racism is man's gravest threat to man. Race prejudice is a treacherous denial of the existence of God."

For those who participated in the Civil Rights Movement, such sentiments were fuel for massive change. Shared Dreams is a testament to the power of the human spirit and its possibilities when we have the courage to live the strength of our convictions. The book brings to life the history of Dr. King's lifelong fight for the rights of Black men and women in America, and his support of Jews and Jewish issues. Simultaneously, Rabbi Schneier explores Jewish consciousness, its morality and beliefs, the similarities between these two victimized peoples and their battles with racism. He shows how the philosophical bonds that these two groups created, forged a mutual soliarity so strong that it has never been equaled since. Baptist Ministers, Rabbis, children and adults, all fought side by side for freedom for respect, the freedom to vote, and the still on-going battle for equality. We forget that it was only forty short years ago that segregation was the norm in America, that Jim Crow was the law of the land, and that men, women and children underwent beatings, lynchings and cold-blooded murder simply because they were black, Jewish or dared to dream of equal rights.

I grew up in New York City, the only daughter of holocaust survivors. I spent my youth watching the freedom marches on television while my parents talked about what a great man Dr. Martin Luther King was. By the time I graduated from college I had marched on Washington to end the war in Vietnam and by 1974 was working for a firm in Greenville, South Carolina. In my young life I had witnessed the assassination of John F. Kennedy, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and Bobby Kennedy and what I believed to be the end of a remarkable era. But nothing prepared me for what I would experience as a Yankee Jewess from New York City, in the bigoted little town of Greenville, South Carolina.

Almost from the moment I arrived I began receiving phone calls at work from a jovial and friendly man who referred to himself as "the Phantom," whose job he claimed was to "be there" for me since I was so far from home. At some point he said we would take me to dinner and all would be revealed. He assured me that he was my friend, put up to this good-natured prank by friends of mine from New York. He called regularly, twice a week, every week without fail.

Meanwhile, day to day life began. I was the only person in Greenville to drive a ten speed bike to work. The norm in New York, this minor detail made me an oddity in the South. The coffee room was the site of raucous jew and nigger jokes each morning. I seemed to be the only person who found them offensive. Or perhaps they were there for my benefit, but I doubted it. They all seemed to enjoy the ritual too much. After the mail boy asked me to join his church choir, and I declined as politely as I could without getting into too much detail, he soon learned that I was Jewish and simply stopped bringing me my mail.

The woman who was my colleague invited me to go to church with her and later join her family for Sunday dinner. I accepted. Over dinner her father asked me where my horns were. Without blinking I explained I'd had them removed as a child. Ah, that explained why I didn't have any scars. The experience made me wonder if perhaps I should move to a city where people read something other than Neo-Nazi propaganda.

My only ally, and the most dignified man in the building who became my closest friend and confidante during my stay at this agency, was an elderly black man named John, who happened to be the janitor. We would often talk in the

A TEACHERS EXPERIENCE WITH THE FUNNY- AND MORTIFYING

By Janet Berg

I try to understand the story behind the tragic headlines of school shootings and teenage suicides. Too often these kids have no one to listen to them. They come home to broken homes, empty homes, and a television set void of morals.

After it is too late, a notebook full of feelings, they've hidden in a drawer is discovered. Apparently, no one noticed what was going on, on the inside. Why do adults push competitiveness over compassion, and materialism over the time spent with our children?

Being a substitute teacher, and not having to deal with making up lesson plans and meeting state standards, I am afforded the time to do other creative things with the kids, like writing. A lot of what is bottled up in them comes out on paper; and it is usually the "invisible" child that does the most writing - the child who does not fit the "mold." I encourage their sense of humor to surface, as I find it can be a cure-all for their growing pains.

Whenever there's time, I ask the class to write their hearts out.

Occasionally, I hear a few whines, "Oh, do we have to?" And I just smile, because I know they'll like it, especially the "invisible" ones - the ones who write feverishly on their third piece of paper.

Even in classrooms with discipline problems, where I could use an air traffic controller for all the paper airplanes the room suddenly transforms, and I can hear a pin drop. They start to realize their existence through their own voice.

The children have slowed me down enough to really hear them and their simple charm before they grow up.

On a lighter note, let me tell you about some of the amusing experiences I had in our local schools, and why they always put a smile on my face.

During a math problem, I ask them: "If an item cost fifty-four cents, and you give the clerk $1; what do you think the clerk would say when he gives back your change?"

"Have a nice day?" one child answers.

Teaching kindergarten I've learned that these little people say the funniest things and the beauty is that they don't know they're being funny.

I pass out nametags I brought in, so that I'll know everyone's names when I call on them. The kids are busy working on this with their crayons as I take attendance.

"Andrew?" I call out several times. No answer. Finally, a little girl tugs at my sweater. "Andrew's not here," she confides in me, "but I know an Andrew in another class."

"Ahhh! That's done," I sigh to myself. Then I look down at all the little people sitting at their little tables, and they are all proudly wearing their nametags full of, well, scribble. I turn my head this way and that, trying to figure out the tongue twisters.

It's the letter "S" day. I ask them, "Can you name words that begin with the letter 'S'?" They scrunch up their little faces with thought and say words like, "sunny" and "silly" and "stop." One girl rushes up to me all excited and says, "Ssssssssspool. My father's a cesspool and he even has the truck."

Another time I have twenty-four first-graders that talk "at" me at the same time in their little "Telatubby" voices: "Mrs. Berg, my shoes are untied."

"Mrs. Berg, my stomach has a headache."

"Mrs. Berg, Joshua just hit me."

"Mrs. Berg," "Mrs. Berg," "Mrs. Berg."

AAAAAAHHHH!" My head is spinning. Suddenly, I hear myself sounding like a drill sergeant. Was that me saying, "Alright, LISTEN UP" to these two-foot tall creatures? I guess so; suddenly they all stop and just look at me.

After some time, I get a system down. "Okay, blue table put your notebooks in your cubby, red table you may go get your lunch, green table put your crayons away, orange table you're too noisy."

On one of the first days I was there, I was certainly thrown into the fire (no pun intended), as there was a fire drill, and we had to find the nearest exit outside, with the least amount of afternoons over coffee and he would describe for me his family and friends. One afternoon, after I had resigned, I asked him why he stayed in such a racist environment.

"Oh things are much better now. Ten years ago, they would have hung me for talking to you." The remark broke my heart.

The calls from the Phantom intensified, and knowing that I was planning to return to NYC, I gave in to his demand to meet. We met at the airport. He was arriving from a flight from Chicago. We walked to his car, which I noticed was unmarked. We had planned to go to a restaurant for lunch. However, he suddenly changed his mind, claiming that he needed to change his clothes. Despite my objections, we stopped at an apartment with no name on the mailbox or door. I started to feel incredibly angry. Did he have a gun? Everyone in Greenville had at least one. We sat down in the living room. What ensued was eight hours of negotiations. He demonstrated through phone calls, all the other women with whom he had phone relationships all over the country.

After much prodding he told me that he was a member of the "brotherhood," and that he had been hired for $500, to rape me, take my money and leave me in the street. When I asked him Why? he responded, "You weren't supposed to look like this."

"Really?" I said. "How was I supposed to look?" "You were supposed to have a big nose and frizzy black hair and big ears." He said.

"Oh, I see," I answered, "I was supposed to be the stereotype of a Jew, is that right?"

"Yes," he said.

"Is it confusing that I don't look Jewish?" I asked "Yes."

"Do you have a daughter?" I asked.

"Yes. She's your age and she's an artist, like you." He said.

"What would you do if someone did to her, what you are supposed to do to me?" I asked.

"I'd kill him." He answered.

"Well then. I haven't done anything to hurt you. Why do you want to hurt me?"

I held my breath and hoped for the best. I figured he'd either shoot me, or let me go.

I resigned from my job the next day. And until my safe arrival in the big apple I had a call-in time with a friend in New York twice daily. If I missed that call-in time by ten minutes he would have "his people" crawling all over Greenville in an hour. When the news got around that I was leaving, an art director I worked with slapped me on the ass as I entered the room for a meeting and said,

"You learn slow, but you learn."

It took all my self-control to keep from slapping him across the face.

Years later I say to him and all his white robed cronies, YOU LEARN SLOW, BUT YOU LEARN.

As long as we remember Martin Luther King, Jr., and all the courageous people who stood beside him working to make his Shared Dreams a reality, we will find the courage to "love the love of good" and defy the "treacherous denial of the existence of God."

cartwheels as we file down the hallway. On that same day, there's a huge assembly held in the big gym. Without help, I have to control twenty-four little munchkins. I pray they will behave themselves for this novice, in front of all the other teachers, the principal, and all the dignitaries from the fire department.

At the end of the day, I am thinking dismissal isn't for another hour; but suddenly the bell goes off.

Over the loud speaker, it is announced that the buses are here and first graders are dismissed.

"Everyone stop what you're doing. The buses are outside. You have to line up NOW."

Of course, we were the last class outside and the principal says, "You have to get your class out here a lot sooner, Mrs. Berg." Mortified, I start walking back to the school. I look back at a few faces pressed against the bus windows. They are waving goodbye, and I could pick out my students. They are the colorful ones.

What a gift I receive every day I am with the children. They offer me the gift of humor, and I gratefully accept it.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

"Talking With Mrs. Kohmeini"

February 1, 1980

We found the Mrs. Ayatollah Kohmeini standing over her stove in her small Qum apartment, stirring the soup that she was preparing for the noon meal. Mrs. Kohmeini is a small woman, about sixty years old, with frizzy gray hair that looks as if it were at one time blond. She wore the traditional Iranian robe of the wife of an Ayatollah, Persian slippers and a surprisingly western touch: hair curlers. It was eleven o'clock in the morning.

"Mrs. Kohmeini," we said. "It seems amazing to us that after all these months, with all these journalists and newsmen in Iran, nobody has thought to interview you until now."

"Well, I've been here. If nobody wants to talk to me that's quite all right. I've been here."

"What do you think of the holding of American hostages?"

"Well, before the hostages, my Poopsie really didn't seem to know what to do. There were all these councils. All these shootings. Poopsie didn't sleep well at night. He'd roll around. But now, he sleeps better. He seems to be more FOCUSED. And he eats better."

"What's it like being married to the Ayatollah Kohmeini?"

"He has his ways. He likes thing done just so. But I love him."

"What has it been like since the Ayatollah has become the ruler of Iran?"

"I'm still trying to find places for everything. First we were in Iraq. Then we went to France. Now we're back in Iran. I've got pots and pans in boxes I still haven't unpacked. It's hard to keep getting used to new a apartment."

"So you really don't think of yourself as a First Lady."

"First Lady? I'll tell you what it is like to be the First Lady. I've got people tracking into the house back and forth every day. I've got chadors to iron, dinner to make. Since we've been in Qum I NEVER know many people he's bringing home for dinner. This is being First Lady."

"What about Afghanistan? Has he talked to you about Afghanistan?"

"He DREAMS about Afghanistan. I hear him at night, talking in his sleep."

"What does he say?"

"He says the Russians are scheming with the CIA and the Shah for Afghanistan."

"What else?"

"He says I can't buy one. My old ripped Afghan is still good. He says this is in his sleep."

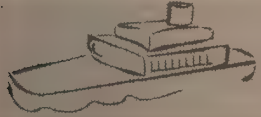

"What was it like under the Shah?"

"Terrible. The Shah didn't like Poopsie at all. He made him very unhappy. He was miserable around the house. He'd kick the camel and throw the dishes."

"Are things better since the revolution?"

"They're better for Poopsie. But they're harder for me. For instance, I can't get any Saran Wrap. You know what life is like without Saran Wrap? Before the revolution there was plenty of Saran Wrap. You could wrap leftovers with it, cover cold soup with it. Now you can't get any."

Mrs. Kohmeini looked up from her stove. She said, "Poopsie should be home any minute. I don't want him getting any ideas." -Dan Rattiner

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Rattiner

Observations of a New Islander #93 Valentine's Day

It's interesting how tragedies and misfortunes in our lives sometimes become laughable events in retrospect. I am clearly the stupidest woman I know when it comes to men. In the Parade of Fools, my face is on the first three floats.

I hate Valentine's Day. On Valentine's Day in 1981, on our second Valentine's Day as a married couple, my ex-mistake gave me a dozen beautiful long stem roses. I love roses and as I recall, this was an exceptionally beautiful bouquet. I set the vase on the table and sat down to look at my roses. As I filled with feelings of love for my spouse, he chose that exact moment to confess a ten month affair with a co-worker.

In the Guide to Being a Lousy Husband Handbook, Chapter 7 is called "Don't Ask, Don't Tell." The chapter explains the benefits of not confessing affairs that your wife has no clue about. I don't think my spouse read that chapter. I stayed with him of course because he swore he'd never do it again. And he meant it because he got me some expensive jewelry.

Fast forward four years, Valentine's Day again. I am putting the finishing touches on an eighteen month project for my degree in Hospital Administration. I am exhausted to the bone. I must completely focus on this project. My spouse had been hammering at me all day to go to a fertility clinic because he wanted to start a family and he was angry that I wasn't pregnant.

I suggested it might be HIM. He chose that exact moment to tell me about another affair with a co-worker and the woman he told me about four years earlier had gotten pregnant and aborted. I thought I was in a Woody Allen movie. Anyway, he was sorry again and I got more expensive jewelry to prove he was sorry.

In the Guide to Being a Lousy Husband Handbook, page 87 clearly states, "When attempting to induce your wife to become pregnant, resist the urge to cite the number of other women you have gotten pregnant since your marriage."

Since I came back to Shelter Island two years ago, I've been asked out three times, by married men. Well, fat does not mean desperate. I can't imagine putting another woman through what I went through.

I thought I'd share some more tips from the Guide to Being a Lousy Husband Handbook. A few pointers I've gleaned from other women I've talked to.

Don't charge flowers for your girlfriend on your wife's credit card.

Don't ask out other women in the grocery aisles, your wife could be in the next aisle dummy.

A strange hairbrush in the bathroom will be noticed.

We know you don't shower before you come home from a poker game.

Don't call out the wrong name in bed.

Since when did you start buying new clothes for yourself?

Especially new underwear...

Just when did you realize you should've seen the dentist years ago?

When caught "en flagrante" don't even bother trying to talk your way out of it. What are you going to say to your wife? "Hey, who ya gonna believe? Me or you're lyin' eyes?"

You bought yourself a gold chain? Right...

Why can't she call a plumber? How come she needs you to come look at her sink?

My ex begged me not to file for divorce. He said he believed marriage was forever. I admit to being a bitch. I wanted to go for counseling and I kept demanding he give up the girlfriend...

On December 25, 1996, he gave me a faux mink coat to die for.

Most real looking fake I have ever seen.

On December 26, 1996, I filed for divorce... and I wore the coat when I did. Hey Honey, I gotcha Valentine right heah...

things and then went ahead with them. Susan B. Anthony said that women should get to vote and wouldn't give up till they got it. President Roosevelt, who had determinedly kept America out of the war, did a quick 180 when the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor. He broadcast a declaration two hours after the first bombs fell.

Here's how Hillary, to judge by her performance, would handle the bombing of Pearl Harbor. She'd form an exploratory committee, then go out and tour the country and hear what people had to say, then announce that she would be making an announcement soon, and by that time the Japanese would have been storming through Chicago and crossing the Appalachians, heading for Philadelphia.

The only thing I can see that is a positive thing, in favor of Hillary's candidacy, is Mayor Giuliani. Next week, I intend to write an article about why I can't vote for Mayor Giuliani for the senate, that is, unless the Mayor somehow manages to rescind freedom of the press before that time.

Who'd like to join me in forming a committee to get Senator Moynihan to un-retire? ●

A Breath Of Fresh Air

One of the hot tickets this week was to the premiere of Oxygen's Television network, appropriate taking place on 02-02, at Chelsea Market. I was lucky to be with one of the "plus two" guests, advertising legend Jay Chiat and his ladyfriend, well known landscape architect Edwina Von Gal, who has done some of the Hamptons' outdoor masterpieces. Lots of celebrities were there and lighting made it difficult to take photos. The main attraction was clearly Oprah, who could light up any crowd, even those with celebrity attitudes, and she got them cheering. So a new women's network, on air and online has been launched, and time will tell if it becomes the home page for our gender.

Also at the Red Horse Plaza, Naturopathica Intuitive Bodywork Technique embraces the idea of conscious touch as a way to effect change on a deeper level with every client. By being present and focused on their client's needs, we allow for a dynamic interaction, a creative process in each session. Listening carefully to their clients' needs and paying close attention to detail offers a unique nurturing experience. In addition to all their services, some of the staff has traveled to Thailand this winter to study Thai massage. A gift certificate is a good idea for the love of your life on Valentine's Day. Call 329-2525.

East Hampton's Gourmet Foods, that great little out of the way patisserie which I discovered last summer, is pleased to announce their new line of delicious cakes and tarts. Their product line which includes pies, flatbreads, cereals, brownies and much more has enjoyed great success on the east end as well as various Manhattan locations such as Balducci's, Graces, Grand Central Food court and throughout Connecticut. Located on Newtown Lane in the Newcourt, it is well worth the trip. Look for their spring opening. Meanwhile, orders can be placed by phone at 329-3993 or fax 329-3391. Call for their menu and all major credit cards are accepted. Place your Valentine's Day orders now.

Check out the giant February Clearance Sale with 20% off almost everything in the store including the already reduced merchandise at Insideout. Located on Railroad Avenue in East Hampton, this eclectic store has a little bit of everything. Bet you find something for your Valentine!

Well, now that my shopping is done for this week, Sunday, John and I are headed for Gurney's Inn and Resort for our annual Valentine's Day Dinner. This will be our fourth Valentine's Day together and we have spent every one there together.

I would like to wish my grandchildren, Michael, Joseph, Anthony, Krista, Chelsea, Marisa and Alysa a sweet and happy Valentine's Day!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Valentine's Day Shopping!

ART BEYOND THE HAMPTONS, PART IV: MARYLAND / W. VIRGINIA EVOKE THE PAST

A trip to this critic's old-fashioned home town of Frederick, Maryland, evokes personal memories from the recent past as well as historic recollections from the distant past. The journey also summoned scenes reminiscent of paintings by Hudson Valley artists: Frederick sits smack in the midst of rolling hills, picturesque valleys, and moody rivers. Unlike the Hudson Valley, it's also surrounded by Civil War battlegrounds and ghosts.

Speaking of ghosts, the area includes Burkitsville as well, where Blair Witch Project took place. (Actually only some of the movie was filmed there; other scenes were not.) The famous cemetery is still intact, although the town's signs are not. Even so, the two-block Main Street provides a background for the battles that once took place. The most fascinating folk tales about Burkitsville, however, are not the hauntings of Blair Witch, but about the ghosts of slaves, who built the ever-present stone fences, and the soldiers, who died in battle. Ghosts are everywhere, in fact, including the Civil War hospital near Middletown where two artist friends (The Katsians) have lived for twenty years. Let's face it; only artists could accept ghosts as their constant companions.

Not far from Frederick also lies Harpers Ferry, West Virginia, site of an important Civil War battle and the hanging of John Brown – a village where ghosts and "ghost tours" are popular as well. Houses perched above the Shenandoah River, fraught with dangerous, rushing water, embellish a mysterious tableau that includes the nineteenth railroad line, whose path cuts straight through the mountain to this day. During the holiday, Christmas ribbons and bows garnish the buildings, circa 1860s – breaking the spell of a time relived and re-experienced.

Not far from Frederick lies The University of Maryland, Baltimore County Campus (as opposed to the main College Park campus). The bucolic setting not only fits the institution's warmth but also reinforces its fine academic reputation (especially its Visual Arts Department). The Fine Art Gallery's Christmas exhibition was a retrospective by well-known artist Adrian Piper, whose installations were recently included in the Whitney Museum's, "The American Century."

What's ironic here is the recurring Civil War theme played out, not in actual battlefields or towns, but in the anti-racist ideas that Ms. Piper brings to bear on her work. She was one of the first African American artists to hit the streets during the 1970s with her performance art. For example, one photograph documents Ms. Piper sitting on a bus with a white hankie covering her mouth – signifying white America's attempt to "gag" black people.

The artist's later works convey similar compelling themes, but in different forms: from video installations featuring Ms. Piper giving a non-threatening, conversational speech about racism to pencil drawings adorning print ads in newspapers. Another related theme deals with Ms. Piper's celebration of her family, like "Ashes to Ashes," a stunning photographic essay with text.

Because Ms. Piper is also a philosopher and professor, her time/space experiments comprise other pieces in this retrospective, their grid-like representation recalling Sol LeWitt, who was Ms. Piper's mentor at one point. It's obvious from the exhibit that Ms. Piper is more than likely mentoring other artists now. It's a good thing, too.

HONORING THE ARTIST: MICKEY PARASKEVAS

Unlike a lot of people, he's lived all his life on Long Island's East End. And, unlike a lot of people, he's never wanted to be anything else but an artist. Unlike a lot of people, too, he has no yen to travel or live any other place than here. In a nutshell, Mickey Paraskevas is one unusual person: he's satisfied with where he is, both personally and professionally.

Someone might think that with all this satisfaction comes complacency, but that's certainly not the case with Mickey. He's not the type to be bored – and no wonder. He's not only an illustrator for Dan's Papers and many children's books written by his mother, Betty Paraskevas, but he and Betty just recently completed an animated TV series. This will make Mickey's third TV series that will be airing in the same season – it's unlikely that many people can claim such a feat. Yes, Mickey Paraskevas is one unusual person.

With all these accomplishments, Mickey remains a warm and approachable man, someone who seemingly maintains his "cool" despite his many deadlines. He also keeps a youthful demeanor, a fact that makes it hard to determine his age. But who cares if he resembles his whimsical, forever-young characters? Some people "are what they eat." Mickey "is what he illustrates."

Let's get specific about his most recent TV shows. We ask Mickey to detail the three animated programs he'll have on the air at one time: "The first show, Kids in Room 401, is on Fox Network now; it's gotten great ratings. We've done 18 episodes so far." (His mother writes all the scripts.) "Then we have Maggie and the Ferocious Beast coming up on Nickelodeon. My mother and I are Executive Producers, and I'm the designer and Art Director as well. And we just recently sold a series to PBS for the Fall, 2000, called Marvin, The Tap Dancing Horse."

It's hard to comprehend the width and depth of such projects without gasping for breath. Most importantly, however, we wonder how Mickey ever has time to sleep. (He also has a summer gallery in Westhampton and a home video in the stores, The Tangerine Pear with voices by actors like Howie Mandel. Another animated film for home video is being planned for Easter, according to Mickey.)

So, we ask, what's the most stressful part of producing these animated films? "It's not the actual creation," Mickey says without hesitation. "And selling them is not a problem. It's getting them on the air, the follow up. The storyboarding, animation, voice-over. Anything in the process can fall apart. You try and control it all, but sometimes you can't. Everything worked in Maggie and the Ferocious Bear for Nickelodeon, however. And with PBS, they picked up Marvin, The Tap Dancing Bear in two seconds. It was in production before I could blink."

We can't help but ask another question: What's the secret of his and Betty's success? "Betty never talks down to children with her stories," Mickey answers quickly. "She doesn't hit them blatantly over the head with lessons. If you tell a good story, children will learn something from it."

Sounds like good advice. Oh, yes, Mickey has another idea in the works – a TV series based on Betty and his life. Now that would be really unusual.

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Kids in Room 401 airs on Fox Family Network on Saturday mornings at 9 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. and Monday-Thursday at 8 a.m. and 3p.m.

Guy DeFraumeni's HOLLYWOOD in The Hamptons

Being a dubiously notable movie critic is as fraught with danger as skating on newspaper-thin ice. It can give cold feet to any clumsy outspoken reviewer and cause them to fall through the cracks and drown in the tepid shallowness of the ordinary, the banal and heaven forgive me... mediocrity. I'd prefer to be in hot water... so, here we go again but, with a cool hand. Gee, kids... I'm only trying to add some of the heat of rowdy, sun-glassed Hollywood (dragged kicking and screaming) into the chill willed Hamptons.

MIDLING MIDLER

Would you believe that Bette Midler, that blaze of bawdy bally-hoo, could be balefully boring and wasted starring in Isn't She Great, as Jacqueline Susann the bile-blotched scribe, who wrote a trash can full of novels in the 1960's and 70's of the sex and drug hanky-spanky that stained that time's thick shag carpets covering the dirty duplicity in boardrooms, audition rooms, bedrooms and bathrooms?

The divine Ms. M is usually able to physically squeeze some juice out of shriveled material however, in Isn't She Great (one of the world's most dishonest titles... note, no question mark and mercifully no exclamation point), she cannot extract an ounce of dehydrated interest...human or otherwise. The problem isn't that it is artificial or dishonest (face it Boobala, this is a Bio Pic. As such, facts are naturally degradable) even a rhinestone has facets whereupon real life around it is reflected and within the refractions see ourselves and the world differently... though usually as we wish to see it. Isn't She Great, is so opaquely dull, you might want to look into one of Susann's weightless tomes like, Valley of the Dolls and The Love Machine... maybe you'll find that Once Is Not Enough, as pixilated as Susann's crudely chiseled stories are, they might stir you from the slumber of Isn't She Great?

BEASTLY BETTE AS A JERKY JACQUILINE

Alike hardly at all, except for stolid wills, they share even less in the movie contrivances from an article by her editor, Michael Korda (a hand-me-down from the famous Korda family of film makers) published in the New Yorker. I met her a few times through her husband Irving Mansfield, who was close to one of my managers. Mansfield was out there... with producers, promoters, agents... his main occupation appeared to be Jacqueline... who seemed, to me, to be not nearly as hard as her lacquered nails or helmet-strength sprayed hair-do. Her straight as a feathered arrow figure differed from the heavy damp-with-dissipation of her novels and girls... flung into the celebrity market of forbidden, rotten food for the grisly mill. Fat too, was her job resume including, at the top, model and actress, sales person might have been in there... she was adept at selling herself, her books and commercial products but, NEVER "sold" to an audience her disintegration by breast cancer.

THIS ONE IS NOT NEARLY ENOUGH

The anger which drove her writing may not be imminently apparent however, I think this "fuzzy-as-the-pink-thing" Bette flits around in in the movie, portrayal of her own story would have had her grinding the bones of the guys who made it. She would rather sell well, I'm sure, pictured with warts and all, rather than be exhibited as an airbrushed relic. Wait a minute! She probably would want both. She was one of those people who wanted... period.

OH, YEAH...

If you're interested: Nathan Lane portrays Irving with no neck and no backbone but lots of voice-over. Stockard Channing has a good line, "Talent isn't everything." David Hyde Pierce does his wasp thing as Korda... John Cleese is a clotheshorse of many different colors and Burt Bacharach oozes his way through the movie with the music.

Camp from beaten head to stubbed toe, this miscarriage of entertainment doesn't have the decency of, at least one dimension. Camp is supposed to be the time bomb ability to explode one's own foibles as self parody or mockery. Regardless of what you think of Susann's scanty immortality, there was the shocking pink world she punched out on her hot pink typewriter. Her land mine strewn writing never goes off in this movie. Isn't She Great doesn't even qualify as a bomb... it's just a DUD.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer, writer and director of award-winning films for ABC, NBC, PBS, and European feature films. He is assisted in this column by Sarah Halsey who hosts with him the Dan's Papers Film Festival.

Poetry Reading At Canio's

DENISE LASSAW HONORS HUSBAND WITH POETRY

There may have been lots of snow outside Canio's in Sag Harbor last Friday night, complete with freezing temperatures, but Alaskan resident Denise Lassaw didn't mind a bit. In fact, she felt right at home. We did, too, as she read her manuscript, an homage to her late husband, The Widow's Books of Moons: Poems for Ngodup Paljor.

Ms. Lassaw's poems are special and not only because we can all relate to the loss of a loved one. (Ms. Lassaw's husband was killed in an accident over ten years ago.) They're special because the poet has a knack for combining specific events and locales with universal concepts. Her language is lyrical which, simply put, juxtaposes the sensual and the spirit.

As an example, her first poem foreshadows her husband's demise a few month's before his accident, but Ms. Lassaw writes about berries growing near their home in Homer, Alaska. Both the words and the berries are delicious and luscious— offering a poignant counterbalance to the death that will come.

Marking (dating) her poems by the full moons, Ms. Lassaw writes on the sixteenth moon about a bone in her back yard. The audience is taken aback when she reveals it's a bone from her husband that she's been conversing with. The irony is not lost on Ms. Lassaw who can still keep her humor.

Other poems chronicle her trip to India to tell her husband's mother about his death. In an aside and as an introduction to a poem, Ms. Lassaw confides that she believes her sister-in-law's infant is a reincarnation of her loved one.

Ms. Lassaw regales us with other experiences about Homer, a place "not unlike Sag Harbor— a beautiful fishing village, resort and art community." The poet's sense of locale puts us in Homer, too, as we understand how and why she keeps her husband alive.

While Ms. Lassaw's words filled our ears with wonderful sounds, photographs by Kathryn Szoka (Canio's co-owner) captured our eyes with creative images. Her series on America (particularly our local settings) reminded us oddly enough of Alaska with its spacious terrain, our favorite being an open, snowy field. Another use of photographic space was Sag Harbor's movie theatre with an American flag in the foreground. The result: compression and claustrophobia.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

Mention February 14th in the middle of July or any other time of the year and it is eternally synonymous with Valentine's day, a day of love and romance. For centuries Valentine's Day has continued to grow in tradition, creating a compelling connection between food and love. While many foods are considered natural aphrodisiacs, such as oysters, caviar and truffles, true romantics believe chocolate to be the ultimate aphrodisiac.

To satisfy your deepest cravings, I asked two of our celebrated East End chefs to share their special Valentine's Day desserts. The desserts are distinctly different, yet both have the addictive flavor and aroma of chocolate as a starting point.

Chef Paul Del Favero with sous chef Gretchen Menser, of Henry's restaurant in Bridgehampton, created a moist and delicious bread pudding studded with white chocolate and pistachios that is served with a warm Bourbon sauce. Chocolate popsicles with Chambord sauce is a romantic confection that chef Jim Slattery is preparing for the restaurant's Valentine's Day menu at the Inn At Quogue in Quogue. A praline is prepared along with ganache, a tempered mixture of heavy cream and chocolate, that is piped into popsicle shapes. For presentation, the chopped praline is pressed into the popsicles to dip into the sensual sauce.

Two dazzling desserts to share with your Valentine.

CRANBERRY, WHITE CHOCOLATE, PISTACHIO BREAD PUDDING

This fruity bread pudding, a specialty at Henry's in Bridgehampton, is perfect for serving at home with friends.
Serves 8

For the pudding

1 1-pound loaf brioche or good quality white bread, crusts removed
2 large eggs, beaten
3 cups half and half
1 cup granulated sugar
Seeds scraped from 1 1/2 vanilla beans or 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

6 ounces white chocolate, chopped or white chocolate chips
1/3 cup shelled pistachios, toasted
1 cup fresh cranberries

Warm Bourbon Sauce

1/2 pound unsalted butter
1 egg white, beaten
1 cup confectioners sugar
1/2 cup Bourbon

Preheat oven to 350 degrees

1. To make the pudding, cut bread into 1-inch cubes and put in a mixing bowl. Combine eggs, half and half, vanilla bean seeds or extract, white chocolate, pistachios and cranberries and stir to mix thoroughly. Make individual puddings by spooning mixture into 8 buttered ramekins or spoon in a buttered 13x9x2-inch Pyrex baking dish. Bake on middle shelf of oven for 30-40 minutes until lightly browned and set. Can be prepared up to one day ahead.

2. Prepare the sauce: Melt butter in a saucepan. Remove from heat and mix in the egg white. Add the confectioners sugar and bourbon. Stir to mix well. The sauce is best served warm. If prepared ahead, heat gently in the top of a double boiler or in a warm water bath when ready to serve.

3. To serve: unmold individual puddings or cut into squares and drizzle the warm bourbon sauce over each serving.

CHOCOLATE POPSICLES WITH CHAMBORD SAUCE

A romantic confection from chef Jim Slattery for the restaurant at the Inn At Quogue.
Makes 30 popsicles

Praline:
1/3 cup sugar

2 teaspoons water
1/4 cup slivered almonds

The ganache

5 ounces good quality bittersweet chocolate
1/2 cup heavy cream
1 teaspoon almond extract

Chambord Saboyan

2 large eggs, beaten
1/3 cup Chambord
1 tablespoon extra-fine sugar

1. Combine sugar and water in a small saucepan. Place over medium heat and stir to dissolve the sugar. Cook, but do not stir, until the mixture begins to turn a light caramel color. Stir in the almonds and when the color deepens, transfer to an oiled cookie sheet. Allow the mixture to harden. When cool lift the praline with a spatula and break into pieces. Put into a food processor or blender and pulse to chop roughly. Set aside.

2. Combine the chocolate and cream in a saucepan. Place on low to medium heat and bring to a simmer, stirring to melt the chocolate and avoid scorching. The moment it boils, remove from heat and keep stirring to cool the mixture down until its begins to thicken and set. Add the almond extract and stir to mix. Stir to cool, in and out of the refrigerator as necessary, as mixture should be thick enough to pipe into popsicle shapes. Pipe onto a parchment-lined baking sheet and press some of the crushed praline into each popsicle. Can be prepared ahead.

3. Beat the eggs in the top of a double boiler. Add liqueur and sugar and cook stirring constantly until mixture thickens, about 10 minutes.

To serve: Pour a little sauce into each ramekin on a plate and surround with a few popsicles to dip into the saboyan.
Voila!

VALENTINE'S DAY CELEBRATION AT GURNEY'S

Gurney's (668-2660) will host a variety of activities for the Valentine's Day weekend. The "Renew Your Vows" marathon runs throughout the weekend and special room rates are available. The "romance spa" will be available for couples from 9 p.m. 'til midnight Saturday, Sunday and Monday night. On Sunday, a "lovers breakfast" and lunch buffet will be served. Sunday night dinner will feature Valentine's Day specials. A stretch limo will also be available on Sunday to take couples to the lighthouse every half-hour. On Monday, Valentine's Day, a full five-course dinner menu for two will be served for $125 that includes a bottle of Mumm Cuvee champagne. Dinner will be accompanied by the music of Tangerine.

VALENTINE'S WEEKEND AT THE CHEQUIT

The Chequit Inn (749-0018) on Shelter Island is hosting a special Valentine's weekend from Friday, February 11 through Monday, February 14. Chef Justin Dwyer offers a special St. Valentine Dinner menu on an a la carte basis on Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings. On Monday (Feb. 14) a special three-course prix fixe is available that includes a glass of champagne. Live piano music will also be featured. Cost is $38 per person. Weekend hotel and dinner packages are available.

TAITTINGER & TIFFANY'S WEEKEND AT THE Side Dish

By Aji Jones

RAM'S HEAD

Shelter Island's Ram's Head Inn (749-0018) presents a special "Taittinger & Tiffany's" Valentine weekend from Friday, February 11 through Monday, February 14. A special Valentine's dinner menu will be presented throughout the weekend and guests who order a bottle of champagne will be entered into a prize drawing to win a sterling silver charm bracelet from Tiffany & Co. Dinner will also be available on an a la carte basis Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings. A three-course prix fixe dinner for $45 per person will be offered on Monday evening (Feb. 14), accompanied by live jazz music.

DELLA FEMINA'S BAR MENU

Della Femina (329-6666) now offers a new bar menu Sunday through Friday. Look for selections such as: steamed shrimp and pork dumplings ($8); charcuterie and fromage plate ($9); smoked salmon club ($10); or the Della Femina cheese burger ($12). Featured beverages include Southampton Publick House New Millennium Old Ale ($5) on draught; as well as the bottled beers: Pilsner Urquell ($6); Sierra Nevada Stout

($6); and Amstel Light ($6). A wide selection of wines by the glass is also available.

NEW AT BABETTE'S

Babette's (329-5377) is now offering some great new dinner entrees. Look for the following selections: "veni vidi de veggio" ($15.95) grilled asparagus and portobello mushroom, almond broccoli tempura, roasted eggplant with lemon vinaigrette and potato gnocchi in a wild mushroom glaze and pan roasted striped bass ($18.95) over cellophane noodles, stir fried vegetables, crisp tofu threads and broccoli sprouts in a spicy Thai broth. Babette's new hours for winter are as follows: Monday through Thursday: 9 a.m. - 4 p.m. Friday: 9 a.m. - 10 p.m. Saturday: 8 a.m. - 10 p.m. and Sunday: 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

BOBBY VAN'S WINTER SPECIALS

Bobby Van's (537-0590) now offers a $24 prix fixe dinner Sunday through Friday, from 5:30 until closing. Also, on Tuesdays and Wednesday a $14.95 dinner is available. On Tuesdays steak is featured and on Wednesdays, look for a roast beef entree. And of course, Bobby Van's thick 10 oz. Grilled hamburger with all the fixings can be had any day, for $10.95.

VALENTINE'S WEEKEND AT THE COAST GRILL

The Coast Grill (283-2277) features special prix fixe dinners from 5-7 p.m. on the Friday and Saturday before Valentine's Day. On Sunday, February 13th, the prix fixe will run all night and includes a glass of champagne.

Jo Jo's Is Jumpin'

What a way to beat the winter doldrums. I picked up The New York Times one day last month and saw the terrific array of restaurants listed as part of New York City's Restaurant Week. The promotion occurs twice a year in winter and late June when a splendid selection of Manhattan's finest restaurants offer a week-long dining experience and the opportunity to sample their fine cuisine at the Prix Fixe menu price of $20.00. We selected Jo Jo's on East 64th St., one of Jean-Georges Vongerichten's celebrated establishments.

The restaurant occupies two floors in a charming town house. The cozy first floor is decorated with red banquettes along mirrored walls with deepening shades of yellow that casts a delicious glow.

On this frigid February day we opted for Chef de cuisine Chris Beischer's warming chestnut soup with farrow (a grain) and crispy bits of pancetta. Another dazzling appetizer was an innovative salad with shrimp, apple, endive and baby greens, each component dressed in its own special vinaigrette.

I will never give up the opportunity to have confit of duck and when accompanied by a fragrant butternut squash risotto and earthy black trumpet mushrooms, I knew I was in for a euphoric taste experience. I ate slowly and savored every bite. Marinated salmon slices layered between crisp potato and celeriac julienne with horseradish cream condiment was also a popular choice.

Dessert included two favorite flavors in this category, chocolate and lemon. Lemon curd sandwiched between flambeed-sugar coated genoise layers hit the tongue with a jolt of brittleness then cooled by a scoop of intensely flavored lime yogurt ice cream. Valrhona chocolate cake with its warm molten center melted the accompanying vanilla ice cream.

The restaurant didn't alter their philosophy to a great extent for Restaurant Week as they continue to offer a changing $28 Prix Fixe luncheon menu throughout the year. What great news!

Adult Immunizations

Parents, pediatricians, clinics, state health departments and schools are getting A's and B's when it comes to vaccinating the nation's children against vaccine-preventable diseases. However, some of these same healthcare providers are earning C's and sometimes D's when it comes to caring for the elder generation.

This is bad news for those aged 65 and over, who are more vulnerable to flu and pneumococcal infections. While flu is of particular concern during winter months when epidemics are more likely, pneumococcal infections occur all year round. Pneumococcal disease alone accounts for more than 40,000 deaths each year, most of them among older adults.

The CDC recommends pneumococcal vaccination for everyone 65 and older, and for people two years of age and older with certain underlying chronic medical conditions such as cancer, diabetes or heart disease.

The vaccine is 100 percent reimbursable through Medicare Part B. Most people aged 65 and older need only one shot, though the duration of protection is uncertain, and some may need a second vaccination after five years. The vaccine may not work in everyone, and it is not effective for types of bacterial infection not covered by the vaccine. Some of the side effects that may occur with pneumococcal vaccine include local soreness, fever or other reactions. The vaccine should not be given to anyone sensitive to any vaccine component or who recently had treatments that suppress the immune system.

For more information about pneumococcal and flu vaccines, contact your physician or public health department.

Interiors & EXTERIORS

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

Epsom salts is a natural mineral, discovered in the well water of Epsom, England, and has been used for hundreds of years to fertilize plants. Chemically, Epsom salts is hydrated magnesium sulfate, 10% magnesium (Mg) and 13% sulfur (S). Magnesium is critical for seed germination and the production of chlorophyll, fruit and nuts. Magnesium helps strengthen cell walls and improves plants uptake of nitrogen (N), phosphorus (P) and sulfur (S). Sulfur, a key element in plant growth, is critical to production of vitamins, amino acids (therefore protein) and enzymes. It's also the compound that gives vegetables such as broccoli and onions their flavors. Sulfur is seldom deficient in garden soils in North America because acid rain and commonly used animal manures contain sulfur.

The causes and effects of magnesium deficiencies vary. Vegetables such as beans, peas, lettuce and spinach can grow and produce good yields in soils with low magnesium levels, but plants such as tomatoes, peppers and roses need high doses of magnesium for optimal growth. However, plants may not show the effects of magnesium deficiency until it is severe. Some common deficiency symptoms are yellowing of the leaves between the veins, leaf curling, stunted growth and lack of sweetness in the fruit.

Magnesium (Mg) tends to be lacking in old, weathered soils with low pH. Soils with a pH above 7 and soils high in Calcium (Ca) and potassium (K) also generally have low magnesium levels. Calcium and potassium compete with magnesium for uptake by plant roots, and magnesium often loses. Sometimes, a soil test will show adequate magnesium levels, but a plant grown in that soil may still be deficient because of that competition.

Organic farmers and gardeners add magnesium when they apply dolomitic lime to raise the soil's pH. However, this product (54% Ca/42% Mg) breaks down slowly, and the calcium can interfere with magnesium uptake. For soils with a pH above 7, many organic growers use Sul-Po-Mag (22%S, 22%P, 11%Mg) to increase magnesium. Although dolomitic lime and Sul-Po-Mag are inexpensive ways to add magnesium, Epsom salt's advantage over them is its high solubility. When diluted with water, and especially when applied as a foliar spray, Epsom salts can be taken up quickly by plants.

Foliar applications of Epsom salts (2 tablespoons mixed per gallon of water, plus 2 drops of liquid soap, like basic-H) seem to work better than adding it, dry or mixed with water, directly to the soil. Plants may not efficiently take up magnesium in granular form, especially in alkaline soils or soils that are already high in potassium, calcium or magnesium. If you have tested your soil and know it has those qualities, a foliar application is a faster way to get the nutrients to the plant.

As for roses, Epsom salts produces more new canes at the bottom of the plant and darker green foliage. Apply 1/2 cup of granules in spring before buds begin to open; 1/2 cup in fall before leaves drop. Apply a foliar spray, 1 tbs. per gallon of water per foot of shrub height after the leaves open in spring and again at flowering.

A magnesium deficiency in the soil may cause tomato leaves to yellow between the leaf veins late in the season and fruit production slows down. Test soil, check on nutrient levels. Epsom salts can keep plants greener and bushier, enhance production of healthier fruit later in the season, and help reduce blossom-end rot. Apply 2 tablespoons of granules around each transplant, or spray a solution of 1 tablespoon of Epsom salts per gallon of water at transplanting, first flowering and fruit set.

POLICE BLOTTER

He met her at the laundromat, then she took him to the cleaners, so claims Thomas Stewart of Amagansett. The complainant met the above woman, whose name he failed to get, at a laundromat in Riverhead. Upon finding out that she was homeless, the good Samaritan offered her a place to stay at his home. Stewart left her alone a short time and when he returned, his house-guest was gone. She lifted $400 in quarters, which can be very handy at a laundromat, as well as $70 in paper currency, and left. She is believed to be heading back to Riverhead, but probably not to the laundromat, as she left behind all of her clothes.

Perhaps the high price of fuel oil drove an unknown perpetrator to remove stacks of firewood from behind James Cash's Montauk home. The wood totaled two cords, which Cash has valued at $500.

It's not easy being green. According to Carolyn Chichester of Water Mill a Kermit the Frog watch was among the items stolen from her pocketbook when it was removed from her car parked at Flying Point Road as she strolled along the beach. Also among the stolen goods were $45 in cash, her checkbook and her credit cards.

A red Cannondale bicycle valued at $1000 was stolen from Mark Stillwachs' shed on Springs Fireplace Road. Although there are no suspects, East Hampton Police sent out their top scouts, who followed footprints leading from the shed. The footprints led north, then east across the road. The prints were lost at 166 Fireplace Road, but similar prints were spotted on the east side the road and continued east to East Hampton Drive East. At this point the police lost the tracks.

An eighty four-year-old Southampton woman reported the theft of two rings from her North Sea Road home. There was no sign of forced entry according to police, and two other rings worth considerably more were left behind.

A fourteen-year-old Riverhead girl snuck two teenage boys into her mother's home through her bedroom window, according to the mother. While the girl "fooled around" with one of the boys, the other helped himself to various items about the house before leaving the way he came, through the window. Apparently, the girl was so preoccupied, that she never bothered to catch the name of her Prince Charming or his accomplice.

A bus driver working for Sunset Coach was dropping a passenger off at the King Kullen plaza in Hampton Bays when the passenger grabbed his cell phone and ran. The driver pursued the phone thief and wrestled him to the curb. Instead of a cell phone, the passenger got himself a different type of cell.

Plaza Sports in East Hampton sold three pairs of ice skates, a pair of pants and a jump rope to a customer who proceeded to pay with a credit card. The clerk prematurely completed the sale, and after the man left the premises, his credit card was declined. The merchandise was valued at $230.51.

Somebody went on an off-road excursion at the Maidstone Club during the night. The perpetrator drove around the fifth hole causing $1700 of damage to the green and fairway.

Animals, namely swans, are the biggest troublemakers on the North Fork recently. Last Wednesday Southold Police responded to a call for a swan standing in the middle of route 25 in Mattituck. Upon arriving at the crime scene, the officer led the traffic nuisance back to its natural habitat, the water.

On Thursday, Southold Police responded to a call in Orient that a seal was standing in the middle of route 25 approximately 200 feet west of Lands End Road. Upon arrival at the scene, police found no such rogue seal.

On Saturday, it was reported to police, that a swan was stuck in the ice at Mud Creek in Cutchogue. The officer coming to the aid of the ailing swan said, "It walked away," upon his arrival.

On Sunday, another menacing swan required the assistance of the Southold Police. At 11:30 am, police received a report that a swan was once again stuck in the ice, this time at New Suffolk Beach. After an officer raced to the scene, the swan freed itself.

Dan's LETTERS

NECESSITY OF LIFE

Dear Dan,
The state's recently proposed budget would impose a tax on drinking water for the first time. Until now, water, like food and medicine, has been considered an essential of life and thus remained untaxed. If water is taxed, can food and medicine be far behind?

There is still time to contact our legislators and ask them to halt this ill-conceived tax. If you have access, one of the best ways to contact your legislators is to go to the Suffolk County Water Authority's website (www.scwa.com). Send an e-mail directly to their state Legislators to ask them to oppose this absurd tax. Do it today, while there is still time. Water, like food and medicine, is a basic necessity of life. It should never be taxed.

SOMETHING'S FISHY

Dear Dan,
Arjun Achuthan's class, which has been working on creating a perfect environment for their fish, was saddened by the recent deaths of all fourteen fish in their aquarium. Eight of the fish were new and had been put in the tank just two days before the first fish died. The new fish died first and the fish that fed at the bottom of the tank (cat fish and suckers) died last.

"We're not sure what killed them," said Tim Briggs, the oldest student in the class. "Maybe the first fish died because it was shocked by the environment and then it poisoned the water. Another possibility is that a piece of bogwood got stuck in the filter. The last thing we think might have happened is that the power went off for a number of hours." The water was tested for pH level, hardness, and ammonia and all the subjects tested were at their desired level. If you have ideas of the cause of the fish's deaths or you can help in any way please call 537-7068. Thank you for your help.

WHERE'S DAVE?

Dear Dan, I have lived in Southampton since 1973, and have read your paper for a lot of years. This is the first time I am responding to an article. "Superstars and Superheroes," Jan 28, the line, "a team of comedy writers at NBC sat around a table for several hours until they could come up with this line." Should NBC have been CBS? You do remember that Dave Letterman moved to CBS a few years ago. Or are you just trying to see who is paying attention, I am. Nice paper, I enjoy it keep up the good work.

Ingrid Lemme's American Dream

On Tuesday, February 15, at 7:30 p.m., WVVH TV will present a new incarnation of American Dream, a program conceived and moderated by Gurney's Inn's public relations wizard, Ingrid Lemme. It was in 1997 that Ms. Lemme put the first shows of American Dream on LTV in Wainscott. The program had a special meaning for Ms. Lemme. She wanted to focus on, as she said, "the hopes and dreams and realities of people who have come to this country. Which is what America is supposed to be all about."

She had arrived here from Germany in her thirties. "When you come from another country you are like an intruder. You are the one with an accent. And here I was, from the country that started two world wars. Even though the last war was a half century ago, I still felt - even though people didn't say it - that I was from the 'enemy.' Suddenly I was responsible for something I was not responsible for."

Although some people could say things, cruel things outright. She said that when her son was ten - "And he has no accent," she added - one of his peers called him a Nazi.

This was all the more disturbing because Ms. Lemme's grandfather had died in a concentration camp; he had tried to help a Jewish friend.

"So I wanted to do the show as a message of hope for immigrants. And I was really encouraged at LTV, especially by Vic Teich, who directed the show. There were times when I wanted to give it up, but he always encouraged me."

The newer series of the American Dream, while certainly not ignoring the diverse (and yet at the same time very similar) stories of immigrants, will be focusing on "the American Dream" for homegrown citizens as well. The first show will feature none other than the editor/publisher-in-chief of this estimable publication, Dan Rattiner, and on tap are such guests as artist David Porter, newly elected East Hampton Supervisor Jay Schneiderman and Congressman Michael Forbes.

Ms. Lemme said, "My director is Sabina Hindra. And Yvette Somekh, who used to produce The Alan Burke Show in the '70s, is going to be my producer. Her family came from Iraq during World War II." Ms. Somekh read about (in Dan's) Ingrid's wedding two years ago at the World Trade Center. Ingrid added, "She also saw American Dream that year and called me and said, 'I want to produce your show.'"

Ms. Lemme related that last year she had gotten a call from a friend in Montauk who said, "Dan Rather just stole your show." What happened was that Rather was starting a series of programs also called The American Dream. While the phrase "the American Dream" has certainly been around for a long time, Ms. Lemme thought that Mr. Rather's creation was a little more than coincidence. "After all, I know he has a place out here. So maybe I'll just invite him on my show."

She went on, "We have a beautiful set, donated by Curly Willow in East Hampton, and we have the works of local artists on the walls. If a particular artist is a guest, their work will be on the wall."

The coming of American Dream to WVVH will mean a greatly expanded audience for Ingrid Lemme. "It will cover all of Suffolk, about 650,000 households. And best of all," she said, "because this is actually commercial TV, I get to say, 'Don't go away, I'll be right back after these messages.'"

MON-TALK with Ingrid Lemme

So, how did you like my column last week when Scott Geery of country town had saved a kitten's life in a snowstorm? Pretty neat for a member of the Mars club, isn't it? Did you feel that my column was somehow nice, cute, but real short? Welcome to the discovery club, I am going berserk over my deadline for the book To the Point. To be honest, I was really not fair to you my dear reader friends and since honesty is supposedly the key to hearts and happiness, this is my apology. Did I have the time to write the 12,000 words introduction to the Twin Forks and Shelter Island? No, I didn't; but it will probably be the only chance I ever get, to see my splendid writings in a hardcover book and I am vain and grandiose! Vanity and such are character defects; Father Peter pointed it out once or twice, gee. Father Peter from the Catholic Church in country town, who renews marriage vows on Valentine's weekend, invited all to a square dance evening for the whole family last Friday. I like to pretend that I don't care for that country-style-hoppin' but it is really not the truth! I am to stupid to dance with several couples in line and can't do what everybody else is doing, the girls dressed in red, the guys in black. I was told that it was a huge success, one hundred eighty people showed up the country-church-hop and the next time around, step dancer husband and I are going, too. Father Peter is a young priest with a real great outlook on life, just like the young Rev. Dr. John Best from the Community Church. Montauk is getting ready for the 2nd annual Renew Your Vows Marathon at Gurney's Inn; this time they are renewing marriage vows over three days and a total of thirty-two hours.

WLNGs Paul Sidney is covering the event live for thirty-two hours and Hamptons Limo sends a long- stretch-limo to the Lighthouse with newly wed renewed couples over twelve hours on Valentine's Eve Sunday. Billings Lingerie of Southampton and Hamptons Bride of Wainscott are doing a eight hour bridal show. Annie from Pete's Potting Shed is donating the corsages for the one hundred brides and the bouquets for the models. Star decorator Juan Rueda once again transforms Gurney's Inn into cupid's love wonderland for three days. Oh, and very important, the Roman Bath with waterfall is coed for the entire weekend and after 9:00 pm until midnight the pool is lit with romantic red candle light for the couples who have renewed their commitment and promise to stay together through good and bad times until death parts them. The Honorable Judge Jim Ketchum, Rabbi Cohen, Interfaith Minister Joan Schauer and Father Peter are available to you to do so. I love Montauk.

-Love Ingrid

Ingrid Lemme is show hostess of American Dream. The show airs Tuesdays on Channel 58, WVVH at 7:30 pm, starting February 15th. Reruns are aired on Channel 27, LTV Tuesdays at 4:30 pm, Thursdays at 7:30 pm and Saturdays at 11:30.
